Maximilian Pika focuses his practice on international arbitration matters, including commercial arbitration, investment treaty arbitration and public international law.

Maximilian studied at Bucerius Law School and the University of Sydney as a Studienstiftung scholar. Eventually, he was awarded the Diploma of the Hague Academy of International Law, trained with international law firms – inter alia, in Tokyo – and completed his doctoral dissertation titled “Third-Party Effects of Arbitral Awards” at Heidelberg University. Throughout his doctoral studies, he was a fellow of a Max Planck Research School, taught senior students and served as court expert on the application of foreign law.

Having coached numerous teams for the Willem C. Vis International Commercial Arbitration Moot, Maximilian furthermore founded a moot capacity building project in Ethiopia.
